STUDENT CENTER VICE EXPOSED

Music Program Success Due To Toy PA System

This year, with the institution of the new toy known as the P.A. System, a new subject has become prevalent at the cafeteria lunch tables. The musical offerings played over the P.A. System have indeed caused much comment.

A new list, outlining the program selection beginning this Monday, has been released by the Dean of Men, Father Scotch. The new program lists varying selections for each day of the week.

Monday's program will feature the jungle rhythms of "The Nairobi Rollers", "Johnny and the Windblowers", "The Four Screams", the Inimitable "Faboon" and the one and only "Avis".

On Tuesday the mood swings to the soothing classic. Lunch this time of day will feature the "Blastrophic Symphony" by Hans Spemann, "Theorems in A# Minor" by Pythagoras, "The Overture of Social Ethics" by Thomas Higgins, and that truly great classic "All Shook Up" in full orchestra and in three movements.

Wednesday's fare will feature music from the great shows. Some of the selections will be "West Side Term Paper" by Grew and Sullivan, "Arsenic and The Constitution" by Mason & Bean-ey, "My Fair Economics Major" by Samuelson and Boyle, and the music from the show, that holds the record for the longest Broadway run, "South Specific" by Wane and Schuster.

Loyola Faculty Plans New Course

Loyola faculty members announced late yesterday that beginning next September, they will offer a course entitled, "How To Get Along With Higher Ups". The new course will attempt to give the quiet or shy student the necessary rudiments to compete with his oily mouthed classmate.

Topics to be covered will include: "Tactful Board Washing", "Trick Door Opening Movements," "Proper Subjects Designed To Gain A Teacher's Attention," and "Gift Wrapping For Use On Teacher's Birthdays and Similar Occasions."

Such advanced technical topics as "Books To Read Reviews On", "How To Laugh At Teachers Jokes", will also be covered.

Gambling Den Raided Early This Morning

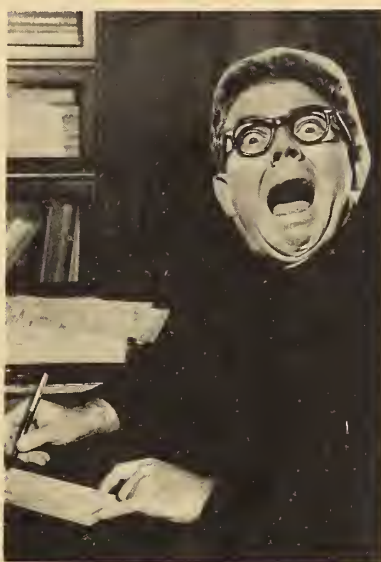

This morning, shortly before dawn, Eliot Ness and his untouchables struck another blow against Baltimore gang rule. Their target was an internationally notorious gambling den known as Bourbon's Street Beat (taking its name from its manager and owner) and, in the course of the raid, the federal men cornered some of gangdom's worst cardsharps and hucksters. The booze palace, Loyola Student Center, was apparently caught unaware and was seized with a minimum effort.

First to fall was a cleverly disguised liquor store which was, this paper is informed, capable of almost immediate conversion to a bookstore. The owner of this establishment escaped but his absurd helper was seized. Ness believes, however, that the operator's capture is imminent as chubby, cigarmoking, short changing Irishmen are hard to disguise.

Next in the raid was a distilling plant operating under the guise (and not a very good one) of a restaurant. The pudgy chef at first maintained his brew to be food and an untouchable sampled it. Lieutenant Youngfellow's condition is reported serious and the chef and his surly crew are being held downtown pending final diagnosis.

By-passing the shower (which is perhaps, why they are untouchable), Ness and his men discovered an underworld arsenal and rifle range along with the offices of a weekly scandal sheet. At the same time local policemen arrested startled gamblers and shell game men on their balcony hideaway. A special breed of checkers (with miniatures) was discovered and confiscated. Whether the "Big Boy" was captured, officials refuse to comment, but rumor has it he left his cassock in the hands of his attackers and like St. Mark, fled naked into the night.

ROTC Volunteers

The Junior class of the R.O.T.C. has bravely volunteered for a series of germ warfare tests conducted by the Chemical Corp. Although the tests have been in progress for several weeks, news of the experiment was kept a close secret until today. Reports of rioting have been received in the vicinity of the Dell Building and our war correspondent has informed us that the secret was so well guarded that the Juniors heard it after us.

Disease Successful

A few of the Juniors such as Ed Murn who is now five foot two and Jerry Balda who is confined to an iron lung, have considered entering suit but have been advised against it after reading the small print in their contracts. Although fifty per cent of the students will die, doctors consider the experiment a success since "we can learn by our mistakes."

Stan Matz has recently commented that the life of a Theology major is certainly a hectic one. Stan complains that his Theology term paper is one of the roughest he has ever heard. The title: Christianity and the Gaza Strip.

Topics for lectures range from talks upcoming on sex and marriage by Father Scalan to pointers on answering the P.A. system by Jim Taylor.

Letters To The Hamm

Dear Gayhound,

It is with disdain that I lower myself to write to your filthy paper. How the American public can stomach such out and out trash is beyond me.

Disgustingly yours,
Editor, Confidential

Dear Gayhound,

It has been brought to my attention that all that appears in your paper is not true. Sirs, the lowest scum on earth is a liar.

Respectfully yours,
Charles Van Doren
Washington D.C.

Dear Gayhound,

I love your articles. Its the only paper that we read here that we truly enjoy. Keep up the good work.

Your friend,
Napoleon Bonaparte,
Spring Grove

Dear Gayhound,

I do wish that yew would stop making sow maney spelling mis-taekes inn your newspaper.

Yoars,
Ima Intellectuelle

Dear Gayhound? ve

I ha been noticin na increasing number of typ- g orgraphical errors in your issues!

Urne truly,
Noah Webster

Dear Gayhound

I have noticed a trend toward un-Americanism in your columns. Why aren't you satisfied with your country? You should be proud of such a great heritage.

Yours,
Fidel Castro,
Cuba

Dear Gayhound,

What do you think you'll gain by knocking people in your columns. In all my years as a reporter, I have never seen such stupid criticism.

Very critically yours,
Harry

Nothing At All

Jesuit faculty members have been seen sneaking into Senior interviews by our on the spot reporters. More money, huh fellas?

Who is the farmer with the baseball hat we've seen on the field lately, and just what does he expect to grow?

Electrical Equipment Company mechanics have been seen attaching wires to the tennis court fences. Administration is mum, but speculators suggest that it may be a last ditch stand to keep wandering beauties off the courts.

The Gayhound Salutes Futtsworth Fennington IV

Mr. Who's Who

Graduation this June will take from us Mr. Futtsworth Fennington IV, who has devoted six years of his life to study at Loyola. Although Futtsworth is not well known around campus, he said, "I have just loved my years at Loyola. I feel that I have grown with it". Futtsworth has never been in an extra-curricular activity, he has never been to a dance, he has never received a medal, he has never taken out a library book and he has never even asked a question in class during all his years here. "I never had time", he said.

Name in Lights

Some of you might recognize the name because it has often appeared on the Dean's List, (The one that appears 48 hours after exams). "As the result of this I have been allowed to repeat some of the courses here two and sometimes even three times."

Personal Taste

Futtsworth (who would be known as Futtles to his friends, if he had any) has no interest for anyone or anything but himself. But on this one subject, which so totally captivates his interest, he is prepared to talk for hours on end.

When asked about marriage he said he was having some trouble finding a girl who has the same interests as himself.

Futtsworth has majored in Educational Solitude, a course which is so intellectually deep that very few people can grasp its true meaning — if it has any.

Glorious Future

When asked about his plans for the future he said, "I don't know what I will do, but I probably will do something."

"Futtles" IV

Lecture To Snooze By

The following Lethargic Lecture, officially recorded in the Annual Anthology of Ambiguous Address Delivered by Awe-full Mystagogues, is printed in remembrance of a former junior, to whom is attributed that now notorious quote, "Never have so many been bored so often by so few."

"Gentlemen, it may interest you to know that the material, which was assigned three weeks ago Wednesday and was due to be handed in the following Monday but which was postponed until last Thursday, is now scheduled to be submitted the day after tomorrow. Now that we're all clear on that work, let's get on with today's lecture.

"Perhaps I better take roll before we get too far along. Is there anyone not here? Mr. Krantonsnop . . . hum, that name is completely unfamiliar. Oh well, he's overcut anyway.

"For those of you experiencing difficulty on this chapter, I might suggest reading the book. Study carefully footnotes three and eight if you want to grasp the meat of the matter. Did you have a question, Mr. . . . ah, what's your name? Krantonsnop? I thought you were absent. Let's try to stay on the ball now, fellas.

"However, your question is irrelevant and out of the field. We are not going to waste our valuable time on things like existence. However, if you are really interested, you could do a term-paper on it.

"Who left this cigar butt on the floor? I'm getting tired of reminding you children to stop throwing cigarettes and cigars all around the classroom. The next person I catch doing it will be sent to the Dean for a severe reprimand. You wouldn't act like that if you were home!

"Where was I before we got off on that tangent? Nothing peeves me more than filthy cigar butts lying on the floor! Let's open the book to page 218 and see what the author has to say. Who said "Nothing?" I'll catch that smart aleck before this year is over, just you wait and see — I'll catch him. (RING) Oh, no, not the bell already. I had hoped to get through this chapter today. I'm glad everyone understands it because there will be a little quiz on it tomorrow.

"Good day, gentlemen."

Continent Braced For Whirlwind Tour

by Phil Symm
(Greyhound Paris Correspondent)

Already an acknowledged classic among the "It's Thursday! This must be Venice!" genre is the summer sojourn of Loyola Associates. Leaving La Guardia in a revamped German Fokker (last seen in Von Stroheim's "Hell Divers"), the group will see all of Europe in 7½ days.

Decaying Chapels

They have scheduled a day and a half for Paris (devoted exclusively to seeing Notre Dame), two hours apiece for Rheims and Chartres and an afternoon for Rome (devoted exclusively to St. Peter's). Under the direction of Mr. Spinsmor Travelmore they will manage to see 123 major cathedrals and monasteries along with numberless decaying chapels and wayside shrines.

Frightening Pace

Moving at a frightening pace they will cut across the south of France in a matter of hours, sweep through the lower Rhine like the black plague, tramp by forced march through Italy, Spain, and Austria and finally arrive in England for an audience with London's leading chiropodist.

One imagines elderly matrons dropping on dusty back roads and Mr. Colimore ordering "Shoot them! Only the strong survive!"

It's rumored the state department is asking the group to include Russia in their tour. Anything to close the missile gap.

PR's Choose Hogg Queen

Ima Hogg in one of her sexiest poses.

Ima Hogg was recently named Miss Secret Weapon by the members of the Perishing Rifles. Selected as winner from among thirty-odd contestants, Miss Hogg will be honored at a reception at Loyola where she will be presented with a full scale model of the moon. Currently employed as a clothes designer in New York, Ima attributes her svelte figure to strenuous dieting and exercise. Ima has just completed a filmed documentary of the life of Cleopatra in which she played the title role.

Music Success Due To Toy PA

Thursday will feature the highly conducive-to-eating sounds of the Jazz masters. Selections will be played from the albums of such impresarios as "Reds" Frydenall, "Hot Lips" Hands, "Duke" Schweitzer, "Satchmo" Thomson, and that dean of jazz: "Sweet Fingers" Hauber.

Friday will return again to the jungle rhythms and in preparation for the weekend, the last half of the day will feature imported Beer Hall Songs, as appropriate mood music.

To really round out the week there will be a special halfhour show dedicated strictly to the playing of "The Hello Song".

Drinking Team Tryouts Draw Entire School

A new sport will be added to the Loyola College's already fine intercollegiate athletic program this spring as a result of an announcement made by Dean Gallon. Gallon's statement went like this: "Since many boys have been asking that a sport of this type be initiated at Loyola, I find it wise to approve a drinking team. I think it will foster spirit and unison among the student body in that most boys will be able to try out for the team."

Record Turnout

And turnout they did! Tryouts were held last Wednesday night over the whole campus and no less than 710 men came out for the team.

Coach Jarrin' Jack Seltzer says he'll have to cut down the squad to a more workable number, but asks that the boys he cuts "shouldn't be discouraged". He suggests they go out and practice all summer and maybe they'll be in shape for next season.

Experience Helpful

Seltzer maintains that you need just as much conditioning for drinking as any other sport. "The boys who went out and boozed it up in high school have the best chance to make the team," he says. "But," he adds, "as in many sports here at Loyola, we can teach the boy. All we ask of him is three to four hours a night in any bar, or if he has facilities at home it will be even better."

Returning from last year's informal team are Friar Brannery, Med Burn and Cave Darney. Brannery is expected to be No. 1 man since he has kept himself in pretty good shape in his four years at Loyola.

Opening Match

The first match is set for April 15 against a strong Mt. St. Mary's team which finished first in the M-D conference last year. The second match will be against Goucher College.

Dunker McNally, Loyola College's Basketball secret weapon for next year, displays his Wilt-the-Stilt-Like Dunker as little Ed Murn tries to defend.

Brad McNally Expected Starter At Center Spot

Loyola College basketball fans will be in for a new treat next season when they see the starting center for the Hound five.

No! Ed Murn will not be the starter. It will be none other than the most valuable player of the intramural league — Brad MacNally

Almost Quit

"Dunker" rose through the ranks of the intramurals. At first his ability was questioned; he was trodden down, rejected, and almost gave up the game for good!

But Brad would not give up. Through consistent practice he became one of the top rebounders and crowd pleasers in the intramural league; despite the fact he's only 5 feet, four inches tall.

Field Hockey Team Loses 32-1 To Mt. St. Agnes

Loyola College's field hockey team was defeated yesterday 32 to 1 in their opening game against a hard-hitting Mt. St. Agnes squad.

This season the Hound hockey team consists of veteran Jose Jimanas (center), Al Capone (right wing), Xavier Cugat (left wing) and Juan Peron (goalie and captain).

The newcomers are: freshman (for the third time) Buster Brown, "Pretty Boy" Floyd, Harpo Marx, Sabu, Primo Carnera, Cisco Kid, Your Esso Dealer, Gargantua, Nick the Gyp, Marjorie Main, Adolf Hitler and Tugboat Annie.

Coach Wilson Beane feels that the team will be greatly helped by the addition of Brenda Lee as The National Anthem singer.

The Hounds remaining games are against the Wambesi Warriors, Notre Dome, Maryland State Training School, Alcoholics Anonymous, and Ku Klux Klan.

In order to play hockey all candidates were required to take an alertness test. The results are as follows: 2% passed, 39½% failed, 18% were in the wrong room, 12% fell asleep during the test, 10% forgot to bring a pencil, 8% asked to leave the room and never came back, 6% spelled their name wrong, 3% made paper airplanes out of the test, 2% are still working on it, ½% thought it was funny, total-101%. (Some wise guy handed in two papers.)

As a group of us were walking past the gym one day, we saw a cloud of dust rising from the parking area. Two figures were scuffling in the lot marked "Deliveries Only". One was lean and tall, the other short and stocky. At first we were tempted to break it up, but then we realized we might never see another exhibition like it again.

The contestants were Gentleman Jim Foley and Fragile Franny White, two of the most dreaded names known in the history of gang warfare in Baltimore. They were fighting for the hand of Ann Affable, the best flapjack flipper in the county. For six months Ann had been flipping flapjacks for Fragile Franny. Two weeks ago, she met Gentleman Jim at the county fair. He was in a wrestling match and caught a stray flapjack across his left cheek. Since then, Ann has had her hands full trying to fatten Jim up with her specialty and trying to keep Fragile Franny from wasting away to nothing.

All this flashed through our minds as we watched the battle unfold. Franny had Jim in a tiny toe hold, but Jim twisted out of it and began to gouge Franny's eyes with his knee. Suddenly it began to thunder, and an instant later it was pouring.

The downpour ended the contest but these same two opponents were to meet again on a different battlefield with the Intramural Heavyweight Boxing Championship as an added incentive.

The big moment finally arrived last Friday.

The first round was close, but Gentleman Jim gained an advantage during intermission, when a group of partial spectators with yellow T-Shirts on stormed the ring and proceeded to work Fragile Franny over with brass knuckles, chains, and other assorted weapons. Franny's live was saved by the ROTC, called in to quell the riot.

The only clue to the identity of these ruffians is the unmistakable facial characteristics of their leader. He seemed to resemble a certain member of the rodent family which is famous for digging holes.

During the scuffle Ann, who was sitting at nearby ringside, started to rush toward the ring with a stack of flapjacks in hand, but the fellow who looked like a rodent kidnapped her.

Any how the important thing is that Jim Foley is the new Intramural Heavyweight Champ.
